»» ComingSoon.net on Sunday published new details [15] about when we should expect teaser trailers from “The Dark Knight,” “Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull” and the new “Star Trek” film.

ComingSoon.net has learned new details about the upcoming teaser trailers for three of [2008’s] highly anticipated movies.

Keep in mind ... the online debuts for these trailers will probably be earlier in the week of release for the movie it is attached to and ... the trailer may not be shown with every print of the film.

First up, the first trailer for Steven Spielberg’s “Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull” is now planned for a debut in [Feb. 2008].

While we don’t know for sure with which movie it will show, Paramount’s biggest film that month is “The Spiderwick Chronicles”. Keep your eye on that one.

Of course, it’s possible Paramount will decide to debut footage earlier during the Super Bowl, but we’re not sure.

In just two weeks on Dec. 14, Warner Bros. will release the teaser trailer for ... “The Dark Knight” in standard theaters with “I Am Legend”.

As was previously announced, the studio will be showing the seven-minute opening scene of "The Dark Knight" before the screenings of "I Am Legend" in IMAX.

"Star Trek" fans won't have to wait long for the first teaser for the J.J. Abrams-directed film.

Paramount is planning a debut with the Abrams-produced monster movie "Cloverfield," [which is opening] on Jan. 18, 2008.

I am screening "I Am Legend" in IMAX two days earlier – on Dec. 12 – so stay tuned for information on "The Dark Knight" teaser trailer.
