Stand-up comic Margaret Cho returns to the Chicago Theatre to laugh patrons out of their seats one more time. She'll assuredly revisit the themes that make her hilarity famous including ridiculing her mom, gay rights and strong political and cultural commentary.

Cho regularly reminds her audiences that she's not fluent in Korean by mocking the accent of native-born speakers. She performs with comedian Liam Sullivan (who currently stars in the VH1 series "I Hate My 30s").

Date/Time: April 26, 2008 at 8 p.m.

Venue: Chicago Theatre, 175 N. State St., Chicago, IL 60601

Phone: 312-462-6300

Cost: $31.50 to $49
