Here is the synopsis for “Compliance”:

When a police officer tells you to do something, you do it. Right? Based on true events, “Compliance” tells the chilling story of just how far one might go to obey authority.

On a particularly busy day at a suburban Ohio fast-food joint, high-strung manager Sandra (Ann Dowd, “Garden State”) receives a phone call from a police officer. The officer says that an employee – a pretty, young blonde named Becky (newcomer Dreama Walker) – has stolen money from a customer.

Convinced she’s only doing what’s right, Sandra commences the investigation – following step-by-step instructions from the officer at the other end of the line – no matter how invasive they become. As we watch, we ask ourselves two questions: “Why don’t they just say no?” “Am I certain I wouldn’t do the same?”

The second feature from director Craig Zobel (the man behind the 2007 Sundance hit “Great World of Sound”), “Compliance” recounts this riveting nightmare in which the line between legality and reason is hauntingly blurred. The cast delivers startlingly authentic performances that make the appalling events unfolding on screen all the more difficult to watch but impossible to turn away from.

Delving into the complex psychology of this real-life story, “Compliance” proves that sometimes truth really is stranger than fiction. Why isn’t it easy to “just say no”?
