CHICAGO – There are still a stunning number of films from the '90s and '00s not on Blu-ray but BVHE recently corrected one of those oversights by releasing the stellar "The Insider," one of the best films of arguably the best year for cinema in the last two decades — 1999. In a year that included "Magnolia," "American Beauty," "The Matrix," "Three Kings," "Fight Club," "Toy Story 2," "The Iron Giant." "All About My Mother," "Princess Mononoke," "Election," "Being John Malkovich," and many more, "The Insider" went overlooked by too many people and certainly by history. With perfect technical elements, stunning performances, and perfect direction by the great Michael Mann, this is a spectacular film.

Rating: 4.5/5.0

The film has actually been digitally restored, not just transferred to the HD form, and it looks great. I forgot how detailed Dante Spinotti's Oscar-nominated work was here or how tight William Goldenberg's editing (he actually just won the Oscar for "Argo"). As with all Mann films, "The Insider" is a fine-tuned machine. He doesn't waste a shot, line, angle, or beat for 157 minutes. And the Blu-ray includes a commentary with Oscar winners Al Pacino and Russell Crowe, a must-hear for fans of either actor.

The Insider was released on Blu-ray on February 19, 2013
