CHICAGO – First Tuesdays are back in Chicago. The Midwest Independent Film Festival will kick off their 2018 (and 14th) season at 6pm on Tuesday, February 6th, with the comedy “Cold War,” directed by J. Wilder Knoschak and Stirling McLaughlin. The film will be preceded by a Producer’s Panel, which will spotlight “The Post Production Process.” For more information, including tickets purchasing, click here. [13]

“Cold War” features Michael Blaiklock and Madeline Walker as a couple – who has just moved in together days before – hilariously coping with the not-so-romantic intimacies of caring for each other while horribly sick. Directors Knoschak and McLaughlin will attend the screening and do a Q&A after the screening, followed by an afterparty.

'Cold War' is the 2018 Opening Night Film of the 14th Season

The Midwest Independent Film Festival is a year-round movie event in Chicago that takes place the first Tuesday of every month, at the Landmark Century Centre Cinema. The festival has been recognized by Chicago Magazine in their “Best of Chicago” issue, and has become one of the top places for local filmmakers, producers and actors to network in the city.

The 14th season of the Midwest Independent Film Festival kicks off with "Cold War" on Tuesday, February 6th, 2018 (6pm start), at Landmark Century Centre Cinema, 2828 North Clark Street, Chicago. For more information about the festival, click here. [14]
