CHICAGO – “Parasite,” a South Korean film with themes of class warfare, struck a chord at the 2019 Chicago Film Critic’s Association (CFCA) Awards, garnering Best Picture, Best Foreign Language Film, Best Director (for Bong Joon Ho) and Best Original Screenplay.

Writer/Director Bong Joon Ho’s seventh feature film continues his exploration into human nature and circumstances. A down-and-out family catches a break when one of their members scores a tutoring gig with a wealthy family. This opens the floodgates for the rest of the clan, as they fill every domestic position (housekeeper, driver, etc.) in the home, and essentially create an absurdist situation worthy of high comedy. The tone shifts in the second half of the film, but is no less compelling. “Parasite” also won the Palme d’Or (Best Film) at the Cannes Film Festival.

The awards were announced on December 14th, 2019, at the Association’s annual dinner. Greta Gerwig felt the love from the CFCA as her adaptation of “Little Women” tied “Parasite” for most awards with four (Best Adapted Screenplay, Best Original Score, Best Costume Design and Best Supporting Actress for Florence Pugh). The other actor awards were Best Actress Lupita Nyong’o for “Us,” Best Actor Adam Driver for “Marriage Story” and Best Supporting Actor Brad Pitt for “Once Upon a Time in Hollywood.”
