CHICAGO – Patrick McDonald of HollywoodChicago.com audio film review on the new film “Truman & Tennessee: An Intimate Conversation,” a new documentary about the friendship and art history of author Truman Capote and playwright Tennessee Williams. In select theaters and through virtual cinema (click MusicBox.com [18] or KinoMarquee.com [19]) beginning July 2nd, 2021.

Rating: 5.0/5.0

This is a sensational tribute two of legendary artists, Truman Capote and Tennessee Williams. The “conversation” is an overview of their respective careers, intersecting both as artists and friends. Voiced by two actors ... Truman is by Jim Parsons and Tennessee is warmly reproduced by Zachary Quinto ... director Lisa Immordino Vreeland uses letters, interviews and writings to express their life and philosophies. Filled with amazing archival footage, especially side-by-side separate interviews by British host David Frost, on the same set, the two are astounding in their parallel virtues and key differences.

“Truman and Tennessee: An Intimate Conversation” is in select theaters (see local listings) and through MusicBox.com [18] and KinoMarquee.com [19]. Featuring the voices of Jim Parsons and Zachary Quinto. Written by Lisa Immordino Vreeland. Not Rated.
