CHICAGO – While FOX hasn't yet confirmed the news, reputable publisher Entertainment Weekly has exclusively reported [17] that Jennifer Morrison is leaving Hugh Laurie's "House M.D." with her final episode to air in Nov. 2009. The report cited anonymous sources.

Morrison has played the regular "House M.D." character of Dr. Allison Cameron from 2004 to 2009. In the Entertainment Weekly report, it was also mentioned that Jennifer Morrison's representatives also haven't confirmed the news at this time. She would be the first of the TV show's original cast members to leave the series.

With her final episode reportedly airing in Nov. 2009, Entertainment Weekly reports that she shot her last scene early last week. The report also cited earlier suspicious of this news when Morrison was absent at the show's 2009 premiere screening in Hollywood. The report says she will not be killed off, which means she could make a guest appearance in the future.

Entertainment Weekly says Morrison's on-screen husband, Jesse Spencer (who plays Dr. Robert Chase), is staying with the show. In Aug. 2009, "House M.D." creator David Shore foreshadowed Morrison's departure to Entertainment Weekly with this statement: "Chase and Cameron fans will be happy with the way we're going to reintegrate them into the team – at least on a temporary basis."

Jennifer Morrison also appeared in 2009's "Star Trek" as well as "Mr. & Mrs. Smith," "Mall Cop," "Grind," "The Edge," "Girl Fever," "Dawson's Creek" and "Miracle on 34th Street". She is currently filming 2010's "Warrior".

2009 Season-Premiere Numbers For "House M.D."

The 2009 season-six premiere of "House M.D." put up dominant numbers for FOX. The premiere surprisingly fell just shy of reality juggernaut "Dancing With the Stars" – that is, in its second hour. The 2009 "House M.D." premiere actually gained viewers in hour two over hour one.
